The European propaganda machine, which has long been doing such good service in the United States, is grinding in great shape again.

It is getting in the ground-work now, through correspondence to American newspapers, for the belief that it is America, and not the League of Nations, that is responsible for the failure of the League to fulfill its announced purpose of guaranteeing justice and peace in international relations.

The American government is now accused by the press agents of European diplomacy, as is now being done in nearly every newspaper of the United States, of failing to "cooperate" with the League council, and the statement is made that our government has "weakened" in its attitude toward the use of war by Japan to violate Chinese integrity. This merely means that the American government is unwilling to join in the punitive measures, the boycott and the use of armed forces, to compel Japan to recognize her obligations under the Kellogg treaty and the Washington agreement.

Such criticism reveals gross ignorance, or misrepresentation, of the power of our executive department. Congress rejected the League covenant, chiefly because of article XVI under which the League is authorized to make war to preserve peace. Just out of one war "to end war" the American people were not enthusiastic about that method of maintaining the "peace" of the world. President Hoover would show remarkable readiness to usurp power should he attempt to commit this country to action under Article XVI, the only means under which the League can proceed to "enforce" peace. First of all, the American people would be almost a unit in opposing American entry into such a war. Second, Congress under our constitution is the body which alone has the power to declare war, and no President has the moral right, even if the legal right, to take steps which would commit the United States to war.

Not only is the United States not the betrayer of the Kellogg peace pact, but in a situation identical with that now existing, when Soviet Russia invaded China two years ago, America and little Roumania were the only nations in the world that called the attention of the signatories involved to the existence of the treaty that was being violated. The League of Nations and the powers that joined in signing that treaty, remained absolutely silent until one of the Kellogg treaty signatories forced another signatory to its terms by force of arms, with as much bloodshed as has up to this time accompanied the Japanese invasion. In this case President Hoover was attacked and ridiculed by the "liberal" and pacifist elements for taking this action. Doubtless it was this cynical disregard of the Kellogg pact which led Japan to believe that opinion would sustain her similar violation. But the elements in this country which denounced President Hoover for invoking the Kel-

LOCAL THEATER

Appearing at the Campbell Vitaphone Theater on Thursday and Friday of this week is one of the most thrilling and unusual picture of the season. This picture, "East of Borneo," featuring Rose Hobart and Charles Bickford, was filmed in the world's strangest danger spot.

"Lightning Flyer" will be shown at this theater Saturday, December 12, with a matinee at 2:30. This picture is one of the best railroad dramas ever shown and with James Hall and Dorothy Sebastian as leads you should not miss it.

Sunday and Monday, Dec. 13 and 14, William Powell in the "Road to Singapore" is the attraction. The scenes of this picture are laid in the darkly glamorous tomtom-haunted jungles of Ceylon. It is a masterpiece of dramatic expression, making it one of the most strangely powerful romances seen on the screen.

Tuesday and Wednesday, Dec. 15 and 16, the management has secured "Local Boy Makes Good," with Joe E. Brown and Dorothy Lee. Everybody who thinks of Joe Brown comedy, thinks of the wide mouth, the exaggerated slapstick and the guffawing gag—and that is just where "Local Boy Makes Good," the First National play in which he is starring, differs from all former Browniana. Don't fail to laugh at and with—the New Joe E. Brown next Tuesday and Wednesday.

Every Friday night at the theater is held Joe's "Kountry Stomp" with fun and prizes. Saturday night five picnic hams will be given away free.

Oakland Speedway
Features 100 Mile Race

Featured by a 100 mile auto racing classic, the December 15th meet at the Oakland Speedway will also include time or qualification trials and a short race open to pilots not fast enough to qualify for the main event, according to an announcement just made by Linn Mathewson, general manager of the Oakland Speedway association.

It is predicted that at the end of the 100 mile grind, the American circular dirt track records for 75 and 100 miles now held, respectively on the Syracuse, New York and Langhorne, Pennsylvania speedways will be brought to California. The Oakland track now holds all American marks from one to 50 miles, established Armistice Day.

Reserved seat tickets for the December 15 races go on sale tomorrow in San Francisco and Oakland at Sherman Clay and company and Spalding's.

logg pact in the Russian case, now denounce him because when Japan is involved he will not commit this country to war in order to enforce the pact. Of course behind this attitude is something very different from a genuine interest in peace or in the welfare of the United States.

RURAL PATRONS
GIVEN ADVICE BY CARRIER YEAGER

Carrier Yeager requests rural patrons to buy their supply of two-cent stamps for greeting cards now. He has additional stamps with him, and if all first class mail is stamped, faced and tied in a bundle it will get preferred service.

Packages mailed with the rural carrier should be well tied, must have return address, and address on one side only. If you wish, put the address of sender and receiver on a slip of paper and enclose within parcel, so if wrapper is torn off the package may reach the true destination; no other written matter may be enclosed. Only seals bearing "do not open until Christmas" or those having that meaning may be placed on address side of any mail matter.

MAIL EARLY TO INSURE DELIVERY
BEFORE DEC. 25

No Delivery on Xmas Day

Christmas is the season of joyous giving and service. Those mailing Christmas parcels can help make the time a more joyous one by insuring the delivery of their Christmas cheer before that day. An early mailing will aid in an early delivery. Every effort will be made by the postal department and its thousands of workers to complete delivery of Christmas mail before Christmas. No deliveries will be made that day.

Owing to the annual congestion at the large dispatching centers and the necessary delay thus caused a schedule of mailing has been prepared for the convenience of our patrons.

Mail addressed to Chicago and eastern states should be mailed not later than Dec. 14; to midwest states, Dec. 15; Rocky mountain states, Dec. 17; Oregon, Washington, Nevada and Utah, Dec. 18; California, Dec. 19.

To avoid congestion, mail before these dates and endorse "do not open until Christmas."

The opening number was vocal solos by Mrs. J. W. Tuck, "The Gypsy Trail" and "Poor Man's Garden" with Mrs. Perrott accompanying. Later in the afternoon she sang a second group, "A Red, Red Rose" and "When Love is Done," graciously responding to an encore.

In announcing the next meeting, Dec. 21, which will be a Christmas party, Mrs. Hyde stated that there would be a Christmas tree, for which each member was asked to bring something—non-perishable food, clothing, or household wares, to be given to the needy; also toys and things for children wrapped for gifts. Curtis Decides He Wants the Vice Presidency Again
—New Senator and Representative From New Jersey.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

ON THE eve of the opening of the Seventy-second congress the statesmen of the United States appeared to be more concerned with national politics than with legislation—which may be just as well, since their legislation in recent times has not been any too successful. A major political event was the announcement by Vice President Charles Curtis that he would not seek election as senator from Kansas, the position he formerly held, but would accept a renomination for the vice presidency if it were offered him by the Republican convention of 1932.

Mr. Curtis is noted for his political acumen, and warm supporters of the administration hailed his decision as a profession of his faith in President Hoover's chances for re-election. Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire, for instance, said:

"The Vice President's announcement will serve to give much encouragement to his party—and he doubtless has reached this conclusion after a careful study of political conditions throughout the country. His decision is proof that there is little reason for Republican apprehension in 1932 and I look for 'the old ticket' to come through once more with a handsome margin."

Democrats and pessimistic Republicans, however, held that Mr. Curtis probably had decided he would have small choice between two rather shaky prospects. Among the Republicans there were some who would have preferred to have Secretary of War Hurley or Governor Theodore Roosevelt in second place on the ticket, partly because Mr. Curtis is somewhat advanced in years and partly because he is a dry. However, all concede that if he wants the nomination, he will get it. That is on the assumption, which appears to be almost a certainty, that Herbert Hoover is again the Republican standard bearer.

GOSSIP concerning the Democratic Presidential situation was enlivened by the progress of Governor Ritchie of Maryland toward Chicago, where he was to spend several days conferring with party leaders and making speeches. He already had visited New York in furtherance of his ambition to obtain the nomination. It is believed in the East that Ritchie is looked on with high favor by Al Smith and Chairman Rashob, and the Democratic chiefs of Chicago and Illinois are known to like him and his policies. Until comparatively recently the Marylander was known to the country at large chiefly as an opponent of prohibition, but he has expanded his utterances to include many other matters of national and international import and has taken on the semblance, at least, of real statesmanship.

FOR the new congress New Jersey supplies one new Republican senator and one new Democratic representative. To fill out the unexpired term of the late Dwight W. Morrow, Governor Larson appointed W. Warren Barbour, former mayor of Rumson, who in his youth was amateur champion heavyweight pugilist of the world. He is now the wealthiest president of the Linen Thread company. Senator Barbour is a supporter of the protective tariff and was formerly president of the American Tariff League. Also, he is in favor of repeal or modification of the dry laws. He will serve until next fall, when a senator will be chosen in the general election.

Governor Larson soon goes out of office and will be succeeded by A. Harry Moore, a Democrat. But the latter says he has no thought of cutting a special election in an attempt to wrest the senatorial seat from the Republicans. For one reason, it would cost the state too much money.

In the Fifth New Jersey district Percy M. Stewart, wet and a Democrat, was elected to succeed the late Alexander Ackerman, who was a dry republican; and thus the lineup in the house became: Democrats, 219; Republicans, 214; Farmer-Laborite, 1; vacancy, 1. Mr. Stewart defeated Donald H. McLean, a wet Republican, by a narrow margin. Stewart made his campaign chiefly on his attacks on the record of the Hoover administration and demanded revision of the tariff act. McLean was a defender of the national administration.

SOME two thousand men and women from all parts of the country assembled in Washington for the conference on home building and home ownership called by the President. Their purpose was to study and act upon the reports of committees that have been for the last year investigating design, equipment, taxation, financing and construction for city and rural homes. Secretary Lamont opened the conference, and Mr. Hoover addressed it, dwelling especially on his plan of establishing a system of home loan discount banks, one in each of the federal reserve districts, to facilitate home building and relieve unemployment.

HENRY T. RAINEY, veteran representative from Illinois, was supported by a majority of his fellow Democrats in the house for the important place of floor leader. He is more of a liberal than some of the eastern Democrats wanted in that position, but his long experience and admitted ability overcame their objections. He has been for years an important member of the ways and means committee that drafts revenue raising and tariff legislation. He advocated a reciprocal tariff to be initiated by the United States as a means of lowering tariffs throughout the world.

Indicating the plans of the Democrats in the way of tariff revision, Mr. Rainey issued through the national committee a statement in which he said:

"The time has come for constructive tariff action and something must be done to bring down world tariff walls."

THOUGH the Republicans lost control of the house of representatives, there was a spirited contest in their caucus for the honor of being the party's speaker.

This was because the man selected would become the minority leader, a place of importance. There were thirteen candidates, but the real struggle was between John Q. Tilson, Connecticut, and Bartrand H. Snell, New York, the latter an outspoken opponent of many of the administration's policies. After seven ballots Mr. Tilson withdrew and Mr. Snell was declared elected unanimously.

At the Republican caucus that preceded the close of the last session, when the Republicans expected to retain control of the house, Mr. Snell was chosen candidate for speaker and Mr. Tilson was selected to be floor leader. In defeat last week, Mr. Tilson contended that his own title to be floor leader held good, and settlement of the dispute over this point was postponed until after the organization of congress.

THOUGH many leaders of both parties in congress insisted that economic issues must be given first place in the deliberations of the lawmakers, the prohibition issue could not be squelched. Before the session opened the wet Republicans were conferring on plans to force the liberalization of the house rules in such a way that a modification bill or a repeal resolution might be brought out of committee and submitted to the house for a vote. Heretofore it has been possible for 218 members, or a bare majority, to prevent such action.

Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut, Republican, made public two resolutions he said he would introduce. One would repeal the present Eighteenth amendment and return the prohibitory power to the states. The other would change the amending article of the Constitution by providing that amendments should be made on a majority of the popular votes in three-fourths of the states.

ANNUAL reports from the cabinet officers and other chiefs were the order of the week, and some of them reflected on the economy plans of the administration. This was especially true of those from the national defense departments. Secretary of the Navy Adams asserted that additional appropriations, at least in amounts moderately in excess of those now being made for the navy, are essential to meet the minimum requirements of an American fleet within the limits of the London naval treaty.

His report was a recital of pains taking efforts in the last year at curtailment in operations, personnel and construction to meet the demand for reduced expenditure without serious impairment of efficiency and at the same time presented reasons advanced for more funds to insure an adequate naval establishment.

F. Trubee Davison, assistant secretary of war for aviation, reported that failure to provide needed funds has relegated the United States to fourth place among the world's military air powers. He revealed that Great Britain, France and Italy all are superior in total military air strength to the combined army and navy air forces of this country. Considering land planes alone, the United States ranks fifth.

Mr. Davison said that the air corps is 183 airplanes behind the congressional program laid down to guide American military aviation in 1926. He added also that its commissioned personnel is short 150 regular army officers and 187 reserve officers on extended active duty. Although the air corps reserve has been built up to a pilot strength of 2,000 men, Mr. Davison said "lack of funds has enabled us to give each one of these only about ten hours' flying for the entire year."

Then came Maj. Gen. Ben H. Fuller, commandant of the marine corps, with a report saying that "stringent" administration economies have cut the corps by about 2,000 during the year. He did not mention the latest reductions which, it is understood, will remove another 600 marines from the rolls of the organization. General Fuller said: "The officers of the marine corps feel very deeply the discrimination against them (in favor of navy officers) in their relative rank with corresponding length of service in the navy, and a prompt adjustment of this condition is most urgently needed."

REVERTING to politics and New Jersey for a moment, it is interesting to read that the Democrats of that state, or at least some of them, are starting a movement that may bring to the fore a figure that has been in comparative obscurity for a number of years. The plan is to make Joseph P. Tumulty the party's candidate for the senate next fall to fill the seat of the late Dwight Morrow and the new appointee, W. Warren Barbour. Mr. Tumulty, as everyone knows, was secretary to President Woodrow Wilson throughout his two terms, and indeed was private secretary of Mr. Wilson when he was governor of New Jersey. In 1921 he resumed the practice of law, in Washington and Jersey City. He is fifty-two years old and his home is now in Washington.

NEGOTIATIONS for peace between China and Japan proceeded haltingly, first one side and then the other raising objections to the plans offered. The Japanese began withdrawing their troops from the occupied parts of Manchuria, but the forward movements of the Chinese armies alarmed them, and so did the advance of Gen. Ma Chanshan, who apparently was bent on recovering Tientsin. Japan temporarily stopped her movement against Chinchow, and it was reported the Chinese troops in that region were being heavily reinforced.

Both nations consented to the neutral investigation planned by the League of Nations council, but both made reservations. Japan insisted on a clause in the agreement, giving her the right to "hunt bandits" anywhere in Manchuria where it might be considered necessary—and with the Japanese "bandits" is an elastic term. China specified that "any new Japanese aggressive operation would create a new situation, requiring reconsideration of the whole arrangement."

JUAN ESTEBAN MONTERO RODRIGUEZ was inaugurated president of Chile on Saturday, having been elected to that office by a combination of four parties and the choice of the people being ratified by the national congress. Senor Montero is the son of a farmer and has been a professor of civil law and a practicing lawyer. He became acting president last July.

The cloths were of organdy with flower sprayed underlays, and each table was centered with a matching holder and candle, twined with smilax.

The afternoon was pleasantly passed with bridge and rummy, awards being made for each.

Those participating in the pleasant occasion were Mesdames D. Harold Cramer, Wilbur Mitchell, E. F. Pope, E. Russell Kennedy, Walter H. Stray, Harry C. Smith, Louis Carboni, Chauncey H. Whitman and Miss Helah Laird of Campbell; Mrs. F. B. Smith of Saratoga, and Mrs. L. R. Gillis of San Francisco.

Kiwanis Hear Fred Whitton on Manchurian Problem

The Kiwanis club enjoyed a talk on the "Manchurian Problem of Today," as delivered by Mr. Fred Whitton of San Francisco. Altho the Japanese may have done some things not strictly "o. k." yet from Mr. Whitton's talk, they are still holding to their rights. He also gave the League of Nations credit for what has been so far accomplished toward world peace. The local club has appreciated several recent talks on this situation, all along the same line.

Miss Katherine Wood, who has very graciously favored the club with her talent many times, gave several piano numbers again today, that were very much appreciated.

E. Russ Kennedy was the chairman. The district meeting will be at Gilroy tomorrow night and a number of our members will attend to give Leon Reynolds a send-off.

A benefit show for the unemployed of Campbell will be held at the Campbell theater December 22 and 23.

LOCAL POSTOFFICE SHOWS LARGE GAIN OVER PAST YEARS

The Campbell postoffice reports a substantial gain over former seasons in the face of the general falling off of business in many other sections and lines.

The postal sales of October and November show a gain of 34.5% over the same months of the preceding year. These are also the heaviest Octobers and Novembers in the history of this office.

As a barometer of general
conditions, the Campbell
postoffice shows a healthy condition. This office greatly appreciates the patronage given it and will continue to render the best service possible with the limited force.
